

Jewish Population in the United States, 1988

THE JEWISH POPULATION OF the United States in 1988 was estimated to be 5,935,000. This figure represents hardly any change from that reported for 1987. The estimate is for the resident Jewish population of the country, including both that in private households and in institutional settings. Non-Jewish family members have been excluded from this total.

While the Jewish federations are the chief reporting bodies, their service areas vary in size and may represent several towns, one county, or an aggregate of several counties. In some cases we have subdivided federation areas to reflect the more natural geographic boundaries. Some estimates, from areas without federations, have been provided by local rabbis and other informed Jewish community leaders. In still other cases, the figures that have been updated are from past estimates provided by UJA field representatives.

The state and regional totals shown in Appendix tables 1 and 2 are derived by summing the individual estimates shown in table 3 and making three adjustments. First, communities of less than 100 are added. Second, duplicated counts within states are eliminated. Third, communities whose populations reside in two or more states (e.g., Kansas City and Washington, D.C.) are distributed accordingly.

The reader should be aware that population estimating is not an exact science and that collection procedures can result in annual fluctuations in community or state totals. It is also important to note that the results of a completed local demographic study often change the previously reported Jewish population figure, even where there has been no actual demographic change.

In determining Jewish population, communities count both affiliated and nonaffiliated residents. In most cases, counts are made by households, with that number multiplied by the average number of self-defined Jewish persons per household. Most communities also include those born and raised as Jews but who at present consider themselves of no religion. As stated above, non-Jews living in Jewish households, primarily the non-Jewish spouses and any non-Jewish children, are not included in the 1988 estimates presented in the appendix below.

Some areas, such as in the Sunbelt region, often include part-time residents in their totals. In the interest of accuracy and consistency, adjustments have been made for such overcounts. For 1988 we have more carefully scrutinized overcounts resulting from inclusion of non-Jews in Jewish population counts, double counting in areas with overlapping Jewish federation boundaries, and overestimation of average household size. This added circumspection has led to Jewish population decreases in areas where no actual decline has occurred. These areas include Kansas City and Milwaukee as well as several suburban areas of Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Jersey.

The community reporting the largest numerical gain since the last estimate was completed was the San Diego metropolitan area. In addition, the Ft. Lauderdale federation recently reevaluated its lists and thus determined significantly higher population figures. The increases in both communities exceeded 30,000 persons. Other Sunbelt communities reporting large increases are Orange County, California; and Brevard County, Tallahassee, and Orlando, Florida.

Significant increases have also been reported by Meriden, Connecticut; Bloomington, Indiana; Putnam County, New York; Charleston, South Carolina; Salt Lake City, Utah; Jersey City, New Jersey; Grand Junction, Colorado; Allentown, Pennsylvania; and Olympia, Washington.

While declines tend to be more gradual, some communities in the Northeast and Midwest whose economies are reliant on heavy industry or mining report Jewish population losses. The largest total decline, 5,000 persons, was reported in Cleveland, Ohio. Communities reporting declines include Wilkes-Barre and Pottsville, Pennsylvania; Youngstown and Zanesville, Ohio; Hibbing and Duluth, Minnesota; Holyoke, Massachusetts; Michigan City and Shelbyville, Indiana; Dubuque, Iowa; Quad Cities, Illinois-Iowa; Waukegan, Illinois; Gloversville, New York; and Battle Creek, Michigan, all reporting a reduction of more than 10 percent in their Jewish populations.

The footnotes detailing the areas included in particular communities have been expanded and grouped by state. Also: one asterisk indicates that the population includes the entire county; two asterisks indicate a two-county area; three asterisks indicate that the Jewish population figure has not been updated for several years.
