

Jewish Population in the United States, 1996

BASED ON LOCAL COMMUNITY COUNTS—the method for identifying and enumerating Jewish population that serves as the basis of this report—the estimated size of the American Jewish community in 1996 was 5.9 million. This is about 6 percent more than the 5.5 million “core” Jewish population estimated in the Council of Jewish Federations’ 1990 National Jewish Population Survey (NJPS).<sup>1</sup>

The difference, small though it is, between the national and aggregated local figures is partly explained by the lag in data gathering and reporting on the local level. As more local communities conduct studies over the next few years, declines and increases that have already occurred will be documented, and the updated statistics may show national and regional patterns more in line with NJPS findings. However, since there are definitional issues, as well as a lack of uniformity in local research, which often relies on outdated lists for population projections, the aggregate counts may never exactly match the NJPS national totals.

The demographic results of the NJPS suggested that the population was growing slightly due to an excess of Jewish births over Jewish deaths during the late 1980s. However, extrapolation from the age structure suggests that for the mid-1990s, zero population growth in numbers is being realized, with a balance between the annual numbers of births and deaths. At the same time, some growth in number is achieved through Jewish immigration into the United States. The most obvious example is that of Jews from the former Soviet Union, for whom the annual quota is currently set at 40,000.

The NJPS used a scientifically selected sample to project a total number for the United States, but could not provide accurate information on the state and local levels. Therefore, as in past years, in this article we have based local, state, and regional population figures on the usual estimating procedures.

While the Jewish federations are the chief reporting bodies, their service areas vary in size and may represent several towns, one county, or an aggregate of several counties. In some cases we have subdivided federation areas to reflect the more natural geographic boundaries. Some estimates, from areas without federations, have been provided by local rabbis and other informed Jewish community leaders. In still other cases, the figures that have been updated are from past estimates provided by United Jewish Appeal field representatives. Finally, for smaller communities where no recent estimates are available, figures are based on extrapolation from older data. The estimates are for the resident Jewish population, including those in private households and in institutional settings. Non-Jewish family members have been excluded from the total.

The state and regional totals shown in Appendix tables 1 and 2 are derived by summing the individual estimates shown in table 4 and then making three adjustments. First, communities of less than 100 are added. Second, duplicated counts within states are eliminated. Third, communities whose population resides in two or more states (e.g., Kansas City and Greater Washington, D.C.) are distributed accordingly.

Because population estimating is not an exact science, the reader should be aware that in cases where a figure differs from last year's, the increase or decrease did not come about suddenly but occurred over a period of time and has just now been substantiated. Similarly, the results of a completed local demographic study often change the previously reported Jewish population figure. This should be understood as either an updated calculation of gradual demographic change or a correction of a faulty older estimate.

In determining Jewish population, communities count both affiliated and non-affiliated residents who are "core" Jews as defined in NJPS.<sup>2</sup>

In most cases, counts are made by households, with that number multiplied by the average number of self-defined Jewish persons per household. Similarly to NJPS, most communities also include those born and raised as Jews but who at present consider themselves as having no religion. As stated above, non-Jews living in Jewish households, primarily the non-Jewish spouses and non-Jewish children, are not included in the 1996 estimates presented in the appendix below.

Local Population Changes

A recent demographic study in Atlanta, Georgia, revealed a Jewish population increase of more than 7,000, resulting in an estimate of 77,300.

A new study in Delaware indicated that the statewide Jewish population increased by 4,000—from 9,500 to 13,500. The Wilmington area was stable, with most of the growth occurring in the Newark area and to a lesser extent in Kent (which includes Dover) and Sussex counties. Newark, home of the University of Delaware and of MBNA, the credit-card bank that is the second-largest employer in the state, also offers a greater range of affordable housing than the older Jewish areas of Wilmington.

Richmond, Virginia's increase of 3,000 was attributed to ongoing growth that was substantiated in the community's recently completed demographic study. As in past years, most of the other communities reporting growth were in the South and West: Sarasota, Florida; Long Beach, California; Howard County, Maryland (which includes Columbia); Brevard County, Florida (which includes Melbourne, Titusville, and Vero Beach); Salt Lake City, Utah; Nashville, Tennessee; and Dallas, Texas. The increase in Lawrence, Kansas, from 100 to 450, reflects both a correction of a faulty older estimate and actual population growth.

A recent demographic study confirmed that Milwaukee, Wisconsin's Jewish population had decreased by nearly 7,000 to 21,300. A loss of 5,000 was reported in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Staff at the Jewish Federation attribute the decline to deaths or relocation to Florida among the disproportionately large elderly population in the community, as well as to the effects of a general population decrease in the area. Smaller decreases were reported in New York: Utica, Kingston, and Poughkeepsie; in Virginia: Blacksburg and Roanoke; in Fresno, California; in Alexandria, Louisiana; and in Atlantic County, New Jersey.

The ten metropolitan areas with the largest Jewish populations are listed in rank order in table 3. Cumulatively, these communities account for over 73 percent of the U.S. Jewish population. The numbers and rankings are the same as was reported in the 1995 AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK, which included a table showing the top 40 metropolitan areas. In the coming year, several large communities—including Philadelphia, Los Angeles, and Boston—will be completing demographic studies. Based on their findings, a full ranking of the 40 will be provided in the 1998 volume.

A geographic breakdown of Jewish population according to U.S. Census regions shows 21.4 percent of the Jewish population living in the South, and more specifically, 18.4 percent in the South Atlantic region. Ten years ago, 18.4 percent and 15.5 percent, respectively, of the U.S. Jewish population lived in these areas. These increases are mainly at the expense of the Northeast, whose Jewish population declined in the period from 53.2 percent to 47.6 percent.
